

THE GAZETTE.

FRIDAY MORNING, JULY 30, 1858

AN ENGLISH MILLIONAIRE.

Ye who listen with credulity to the whispers of vanity, and pursue with eagerness the phantom of a name, attend to the history of one Peter Thellusson, even to the history of one Peter Thellusson, late of the city of London, merchant.

It is now sixty two years since Peter Thel-lusson took stock of his worldly possessions, and found that he had 600,000 in money, and land of the annual value of 4,500. Peter Thellusson had satisfied the ordinary audition of an English bourgeois—he had founded a family. Peter Isaac, the son of his youth and the prop of his house, was heir to 35-000 a year in money and land, and might claim to be a born gentleman. Peers and Peersesses might hereafter spring to intermediate succession from the loins of that denizer of a dingy little back parlour behind the Bank. The best men of the age envied the rich and prosperous Peter Thellusson, who had no other ambition than to be a Peter of a different kind; he had not near money enough. Let other men be satisfied to found one family; Peter was lucky enough to have three sons, and he would found three families. It was not that he loved his sons; or his sons' sons; but it was the hope and desire of this magnificent posthumous miser to associate his name in future generations with three illustrious names.
It did not love his sons; he did not love them; he was simply indifferent to everything except to his own clerical office.

Peter Thellusson took the very best legal advice, and made a will. He left a few trifling legacies, probably to show that no unattractive anticipations to his children tainted that will with mania. But his great fortune was all conveyed to trustees. It was to accumulate until every man, woman, and child of the offspring of Peter, and alive or begotten at the moment of Peter's death should also be defunct. No one of the children or grandchildren who had ever looked Peter in the face or trembled in his presence, or quailed at the sound of his harsh, hard voice, could ever be the richer for Peter's wealth. "And the rich man also died." Twelve months after making this will, and sixty years after from the present time, Peter was gathered through the land in widening circles. Our law books picture to us the blank disappointment of the then living relatives, the gentle cousinships of a past generation of lawyers and the gaping wonder of the general public.
There were three sons and six grandsons of this malignant old merchant that day—destined to live in the light of Peter's will; this great prodigal growing up before them, yet never to pluck one unit of fruit from the terms of the will enjoined, that when the last survivor of all the nine children and grandchildren should yield up his breath, then the charm was to end; the great mountain of accumulated wealth was to be divided into three portions and one-third was to be given to each of the "three male lineal descendants" of his three sons. Having thus done what he liked with his own, and excluded all his living progeny from all benefit, he ends with a will to the Legislature worthy of Shylock appealing against his will, and earned his money by his honesty and industry and he hoped the Legislature would not alter his will. Of course, the first thing that followed was a Chancery suit of the fastest buck. The common sense view of the case would have been to set aside the will, as the product of a diseased mind—rendered morbid by its disposing powers by dwelling upon an irrational object. But Lords Longworth and Alvanley and Eldon, and judges of kindred sympathies, seem to have been led by their love of art, to admire the skill with which the technicisms of the law had been adapted to the object of this old trader. Perhaps, also, they saw something eminently sane and matter-of-fact in this good old surd view of accumulation, or were excited to admiration by seeing the meanness of man expended into something like sublimity in his gigantic proportions.
The litigation went up to the House of Lords and the will was confirmed. This affair naturally made a great noise. The Legislature took it up, and, although they would not set aside the will by an ex post facto law, they branded Peter Thellusson's ex post facto law with the imputation of avarice, and folly, and enacted by statute, 39th and 40th of George III, chap. 98, that the power of devising property for the purpose of accumulation shall be restrained in general to 21 years after the death of the testator. Persons of mind altered themselves with the matter, and with the aid of life insurance tables and Cocker, they calculated that this fund, accumulating at compound interest, could not amount to less than nineteen millions at the end of distribution, and this property was probably worth the tremendous figure of thirty-two millions. But "nothing is so false as facts, except figures." The calculators had forgotten to take account of that unknown quantity which must, in practical matters, be represented, not by the letter "x," but by the word "litigation." Contemporaneously with the Chancery suit to set aside the will, there was a cross-suit to have the trusts of the will performed under the direction of the Court of Chancery. This suit is now 60 years old, and, although children and grand children are dead, the suit is as hale and lively as it was in their earliest youth. That suit was the true heir to Peter Thellusson, and it is still spending his money like a frippery young cornet. Necessarily, there were other suits. There were suits about post-testamentary acquisitions of real property, there were suits about advowsons, there were suits about other matters, so numerous that even equity lawyers, not stingy of their words, are fain to describe them as "the suits of the careful and improving management of the Court of Chancery" also exercised its influence upon this estate. The Yorkshire estates have participated in that excellent system which has been so uniform in its action, that when we see a house all windowless and unpainted, tottering and decaying, we can predict with a tone of undoubting conviction, "That property is in Chancery."

The last survivor of the nine lives died in February, 1856, and four new bills were immediately filed. The property was to be divided, not into three, but into twelve. There is, however, a question raised as to who is entitled. Who were the oldest male lineal descendants of Peter Thellusson in February, 1856? There are two who are eldest in point of lineage, and two who are eldest in point of personal age. This point is still sub judice. It would not be very difficult to guess how it will be decided; but that is no matter of ours, nor would it have been a matter of the least interest to old Peter Thellusson. His object was to make the heap very large; he evidently cared not one look of wool as to which of his descendants might be the possessor. The public interest in this long line of litigation is confined to its general aspect. Peter Thellusson's clever scheme has turned out a foolish failure.
No single Thellusson will stalk over the land, overshadowing our dukes and crushing our barons by the magnitude of his territorial possessions. No thirty-two millions of money are expended into broad acres, where men may travel and say—"Behold the conquests of the great Peter Thellusson."— Whether Lord Redesdale and Charles Sabine Augustus Thellusson divide the estates as the oldest in lineage, or whether Thomas and Arthur take as oldest in years, we should equally desire to be able to call up old Peter Thellusson to see the division of his anticipatory accumulations. The Court of Chancery has so clipped and pollarded his oak, that it is not much larger than when he left it. It would be fit punishment for that proud, vain, cruel old man, to see that he disinherited his own children only to fatten a generation of lawyers; that he was the dupe of his own subtlety; and that his name instead of being associated with the foundation of a house of fabulous wealth, is only known in connection with an abortive scheme of vulgar vanity.—London Times.

A CARD—WM. S. KEMPER and his sons, D. & K. KEMPER, having purchased the ALEXANDRIA BOARDING SCHOOL PROPERTY, APPARATUS, &c., will take charge of that Institution after the present School term, and it is with pleasure that we inform the very high and honorable position from the different members of the Faculty of the University of Virginia, where the father was for seven years Proctor, and the sons were both educated, that I think them highly qualified to conduct the establishment in a manner that will sustain, or even add, any reputation it has hitherto possessed, and justly entitled to the confidence of the community, and have children or wards to entrust to their care.

BENJAMIN HALLOWELL
Alexandria, Va., 6 mo 10th, 1858.

THE ALEXANDRIA BOARDING SCHOOL.
From the preceding card, it will be seen that the undersigned has purchased the buildings, apparatus, &c., of Benj. Hallowell's Alexandria Boarding School, and he will open that institution for its 35th annual session on the 1st of October next, closing on 15th July following, in conjunction with Messrs. J. G. CLARK and DELAWARE and KOSCIUSKO KEMPER.

The location of this School is undoubtedly one of the best in the country, as is evidenced by its having been constantly full for many years. The buildings were erected expressly for use as a Boarding School, and are admirably adapted for that purpose. Gas and water are introduced throughout the establishment.

The object of the School will be to prepare Boys for the University of Virginia, or any other College, or to fit them for the duties of life.
The course of study will embrace the elementary English branches, the Latin, French, French German, and Spanish Languages, a complete course of pure Mathematics, Natural Philosophy, Chemistry, and Astronomy.

The costly and extensive Philosophical and Chemical Apparatus, a fine Telescope, Globes, Engineering Instruments, and a large collection of Minerals, Shells, &c., will give our students advantages rarely offered by private schools.

The Principal was connected with the University, for seven years, as Proctor and Patron, his teachers were all educated there, and besides their diplomas, they possess very flattering testimonials from their Professors. Mr. Clark especially is exceedingly well recommended; he is at present, Assistant Instructor in the University, and will resign that position at the close of the present session. Our united efforts will be devoted to the school, and every effort will be made to sustain the high reputation it has enjoyed under Mr. Hallowell's management.

Terms.—For Board, Washing, and Tuition in all the branches except Modern languages, $200 for the session, payable half at the commencement and half at the middle of the term.
Instruction in French, German, and Spanish, each $20. Charge for Fuel and Gas, $9.— The above are identical with Mr. H's terms except that Latin and Greek are no longer made extra charges, but are now included in the regular course. The session will also be prolonged two weeks.

For Circulars containing full particulars address, WM. S. KEMPER, Alexandria, Va.

REFERENCES.—The Faculty of the University

SUMMER DRINKS.—Silver Medal premium MINERAL WATERS, Carbonated Champagne, and pure CRAB CIDER, ALE and POR-TER, select varieties, all of them superior to, and cheaper than any now to be had in town; TEMPERANCE CREAM MEAD, an excellent article for children and adults liable to constipation.

LAGER BEER, now so highly recommended by Physicians. All the above articles for sale at our depot, No. 38, North Water street, Alexandria.

Excursions and persons out of town, furnished on short notice, by leaving orders at above place, with our wagon, or by mail.
July 28—d1f ARNY & SHINN.

FOR RENT—A WHARF, in good order, with a LARGE YARD adjoining. The property is well located for a Coal depot, Lumber, or Wood-Yard.

Also, TWO LARGE WAREHOUSES, on the wharf, well adapted for Commission and Shipping houses.

Also, a number of VACANT LOTS, on Union street, very desirable for Flour lots. For terms, enquire of GREEN & BROTHER.

nov 25—t1

STORE FOR RENT.—The new three story BRICK STORE, on the north side of King street, recently occupied by George R.
Blackwell, as an auction and Dry Goods Store, is for rent. The situation of this property is in a business part of the city, and its complete arrangements for any kind of mercantile business, renders it very desirable. Apply next door, to HULST & CO., or J. A. MILBURN, corner of King and Washington streets.
